He suggested that people must adopt the 5S policy to minimize the risk of heart disease, which includes reducing SALT and SUGAR intake, avoiding SEDENTARY lifestyle, managing STRESS, and quitting SMOKING. Following these guidelines could help save lives and promote a healthy heart, he said. Dr. Irfan, a cardiologist at GMC Srinagar, told KNO that the rate of heart attacks at SKIMS or SMHS has doubled over the last five years. "There has been a change in the pattern of heart attacks. In the past, there would be 70% fewer cases in the summers than in the winters. However, this is not the case anymore. We are now admitting more young patients with heart-related issues, and performing stent procedures and pacemaker implantations frequently," he said.

According to Dr Irfan, air pollution, rapid urbanisation, drug abuse, sedentary lifestyle, physical inactivity, fast food intake, stress, and smoking are all reasons behind the increased prevalence of hypertension and diabetes, which in turn lead to heart attacks. He also noted that young patients with heart problems were rare some years ago, but now it has become a daily routine.

Dr Irfan commented on the current situation in Kashmir, stating that many people have become reliant on others and are not taking responsibility for their own actions. He identified a trend towards seeking out only comfortable and easy work, which has been further enabled by the rise of online delivery systems and the work-from-home culture.

'Unfortunately, this sedentary lifestyle has contributed to a rise in drug abuse and associated health problems, including Endocarditis disease, which had previously been uncommon in the region. Even college-going females have been reported to be struggling with heart-related issues due to drug abuse," he said. The doctor lamented that while Kashmir has made strides in terms of technological advancements, the population's overall health has suffered due to a lack of physical activity.

He advised that managing conditions like high blood pressure, diabetes, and cholesterol, as well as avoiding a sedentary lifestyle, quitting smoking, reducing stress, eating a vegetablerich diet, maintaining a healthy weight, and regularly exercising can significantly lower the risk of heart attacks.

According to cardiologists, common symptoms of a heart attack include chest pain that feels like pressure, tightness, squeezing, or aching. The pain or discomfort may also radiate to the shoulder, arm, back, neck, jaw, teeth, or upper belly. Other symptoms can include cold sweat, fatigue, heartburn or indigestion, lightheadedness or sudden dizziness, nausea, and shortness of breath—(KNO)

The Law Commission's report on simultaneous polls is not ready as some issues are yet to be settled, the sources pointed out.

For synchronising various assembly polls to ensure both state and Lok Sabha elections are held together from 2029 onwards, the Commission under Justice Ritu Raj Awasthi may suggest reducing or enhancing the tenure of legislative assemblies.

As of now the mandate of the Commission is to suggest ways to hold assembly and Lok Sabha polls together. But the high-level committee under former president Ram Nath Kovind has been tasked with recommending how Lok Sabha, assembly and local body polls (panchayat, municipalities, zila parishad) can be held together. Keeping in mind the terms of reference of the Kovind panel, the ambit of the Law Commission can also be increased to include holding local body polls along with national and state polls, the sources said One suggestion the law panel can make is to hold the three-tier polls in two phases in one year. In the first phase, Lok Sabha and assembly polls can be held and in the second phase, local body polls can be organised. One suggestion the law panel can make is to hold the three-tier polls in two phases in one year. In the first phase, Lok Sabha and assembly polls can be held and in the second phase, local body polls can be organised. This, the sources said, is a practical approach keeping in mind the varied climatic conditions in the country In August 2018, the previous Law Commission had endorsed the Modi government's proposal to hold simultaneous polls to Lok Sabha and state assemblies, saying it will prevent the country from being in constant election mode, but it had sought further public discourse on the issue before arriving at a final decision. The panel in its draft report had also said the exercise cannot be held in the present constitutional framework, and suggested changes required to carry out the two sets of polls together.

In April 2018, the law ministry had asked the Law Commission to examine the issue of holding simultaneous polls to Lok Sabha and state assemblies. (Agencies)

Last 9 yrs saw decisive policies, political stability, economy got new direction, claims Amit Shah

NEW DELHI: The last nine years have witnessed decisive policies, political stability, democracy and teamwork in the federal structure that led the country out of the "policy paralysis" from 2004 to 2014, Union Home Minister Amit Shah said on Friday.

Addressing the 118th Annual Session of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry, he said the period of 2004 to 2014 "shook the country", which was also the "last period" of political instability.

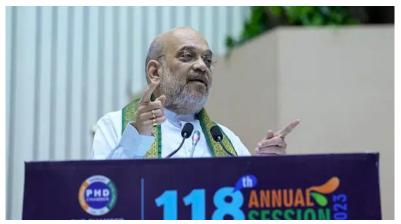

The last nine years have seen the result of performance. The country's economy has also got a new direction under Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Shah said.

"The last nine years have been that of political stability and decisive policy-making...our GDP has grown from USD 2.03 trillion to USD 3.75 trillion during the period, which is almost double. Per capita income has grown from Rs 68,000 in 2013-14... to Rs 1.80 lakh," he said.

Shah said PM Modi has tried to change India in every field in the last nine years and has also been successful.

After successfully organising the G20 Summit, a new energy has been infused not only intrade and industries but also in every sector of the country and all people are experiencing a new momentum, the Union home minister said.

He said trade and industries are the centre of the country's economy, from where it gets energy.

"Due to the changes brought about by policies, today 'India's Moment' is talked about everywhere and India is known as a vibrant spot all over the world," he said.

Shah said whenever a company wants to shift base around the world, India emerges as the bright spot to relocate

"Our country is the youngest and we also have the largest number of engineers, doctors and technocrats. There is democracy here, there is teamwork and the policy formulation is also clear under the leadership of Modi ji. Therefore, now no one can stop India from establishing itself at the first place in every field in the Amrit Kaal," he said.

The Union home minister said the Production Linked Incentive Scheme has fulfilled the dream of Make in India in 14 sectors within the country.

"This is the right time. The next 25 years are extremely important for India's trade and industries. Indian industries will have to move towards changing both their size and scale," he said.

Shah said the need of the hour is that Indian companies become multinational

"The network of small industries along with big industries will have to be strengthened and PHDCCI will have to come forward strongly to provide guidance and infrastructure in this," he said.

Shah said that because of the new education policy brought by the Modi government, India is going to become the best destination in the world for students in the next 10 years.

Punjab farmers stir: Train movement hit; protesters block Chandigarh-Ambala national highway CHANDIGARH/HOSHIARPUR: Farmers in large numbers squatted on rail tracks in parts of Punjab on Friday, while another group of cultivators blocked the Chandigarh-Ambala national highway as part of their stir to demand a financial package for losses incurred in floods, a legal guarantee to MSP and a sweeping debt waiver.

As part of the three-day 'rail roko' protest, farmers squatted on the Amritsar-Delhi railway track in Devidas Pura, while in Hoshiarpur, members of the Azad Kisan Committee, Doaba, sat on dharna at the local railway station.

According to railway officials, while some trains were cancelled, routes of several trains have been diverted. Some trains are being short-terminated in view of the agitation. The stir is underway at 17 places in Punjab, including in Moga, Hoshiarpur, Gurdaspur, Jalandhar, Tarn Taran, Sangrur, Patiala, Ferozepur, Bathinda, and Amritsar. Agroup of farmers owing allegiance to BKU (Sidhupur) also squatted on the Chandigarh-Ambala national highway near Lalruin Punjab. Farmers have also parked their tractors alongside the highway.

A Punjab Police official said both sides of the highway have been blocked and traffic has been diverted through alternate routes.

State President of the Azad Kisan Committee, Doaba, Harpal Singh Sangha, said their agitation will continue till September 30. If the demands are not met by that time, the next course of action will be decided, he said.

The stir has left many rail passengers stranded in Punjab and Haryana.

"The matter is between the Centre and the farmers. Why should passengers face harassment. Since yesterday, we have been waiting at the railway station, but there is no surety when our train will come," said an elderly passenger at the Ludhiana railway station who was travelling to Patna.

On Thursday night, hundreds of railway passengers travelling to various destinations, including Delhi, Bihar and Uttar Pradesh, were stranded at the Ambala Cantonment Railway Station in Haryana as rail movement was hit in neighbouring Punjab due to the protest.

Several farmer groups, including the Kisan Mazdoor Sangharsh Committee, Bharti Kisan Union (Krantikari), BKU (Ekta Azaad), Azaad Kisan Committee Doaba, BKU (Behramke), BKU (Shaheed Bhagat Singh), and BKU (Chottu Ram), are participating in the protest.

Their demands include a financial package for the flood-affected people in north India, a legal guarantee for minimum support price on all crops, and a debt waiver for farmers.

Farmers want a Rs 50,000-crore flood relief package for north Indian states and MSP as per the recommendations of the Swaminathan Commission report, farmer leader Gurbachan Singh had said in Amritsar on Thursday. He demanded waiver of the entire debt of farmers and labourers, and Rs 10 lakh and a government job in compensation to the kin of each farmer who died during the agitation against the now-repealed three farm laws.

School teacher from Uttar Pradesh arrested for getting student slapped by classmates

LUCKNOW: While the dust over the Muzaffarnagar primary school slapgate case is yet to be settled, another school teacher in Sambhal district in western Uttar Pradesh was arrested for allegedly getting a class 5 student slapped by classmates on failing to answer her question.

The school teacher, named Shaista, was arrested for "spreading communal hatred". The incident took place at a private school in Dugawar village under Asmoli police station limits on September 26 and an FIR was registered by the boy's father on Thursday. The arrest came hours after the registration of the case.

The father of the student claimed in his police complaint that his son, in class 5, was unable to answer the teacher's question and she asked his classmate to slap him in front of the whole class. His son felt humiliated and was upset when he reached home.

According to the Sambhal Additional SP Shrish Chandra, the father lodged a complaint that his son's teacher had asked a student belonging to a minority community to slap him. "We registered an FIR under sections 153 (promoting enmity between two groups on grounds of religion, race, etc) and 323 (voluntarily causing hurt) of IPC. We arrested teacher Shaista and are questioning her," said the officer.

In the earlier incident at Khubbapur village in Muzaffarnagar last month, school teacher Tripta Tyagi had asked a child of the majority community to slap his classmate belonging to a minority community for not doing homework. A case was registered against her under IPC sections 323 (voluntarily causing hurt) and 504 (intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of the peace). However, Tyagi has not been arrested.

Indian scientists discover active submarine volcano in Andaman sea

BENGALURU: Two Indian scientists from the National Institute of Oceanography (NIO), and their team have discovered an active submarine volcano (Crater Seamount) in the Andaman Sea, which has been at the epicentre of the seismic zone since it was first observed in 2007.

Crater Seamount has the potential to erupt at any time leading to earthquakes and even tsunamis in the Java-Sumatra region. The timing of the eruption however cannot be ascertained.

In 2018, Senior Scientist Sriram Gullapalli and Senior Principal Scientist Pawan Dewangan, both from the NIO, initially substantiated the existence of telltale signs of active gas venting above the shallow submarine volcano, which is located at 500m water depth in the Andaman-Nicobar Volcanic arc. They revisited their findings in 2021 and confirmed the submarine volcano in the Andaman-Nicobar Arc. Their findings were sent for peer review and the paper was published in the prestigious 'Geo-Marine Letters' – an international peer-reviewed journal in marine geology, geophysics, and geochemistry – in July this year.

Speaking exclusively to TNIE, Sriram said that for a long time, "Ocean scientists have been curious about the Nicobar underwater volcano area in the Andaman Sea. Our interest grew after the Tsunami-causing earthquake in 2004 and thereafter the increase in the number of earthquake swarms over the past two decades. In November 2007, some of us from the CSIR-NIO conducted a groundbreaking high-resolution multi-beam echo-sounding (MBES) survey over the earthquake swarm region, unveiling the presence of well-developed twin submarine volcanoes.

Subsequently, in 2014, we carried out an Ocean Bottom Seismometer (OBS) survey spanning four months, aimed at monitoring the volcanic arc. During this period, we detected earthquake swarms characterized by low-frequency and distinct hydro-acoustic phases, indicating the presence of sub-surface tectonic and magmatic influences that were associated with a shallow magma chamber," said Sriram.

Building upon this research, Sriram and Dewangan along with some other scientists.

CM Kejriwal announces winter action plan, says pollution levels declined in Delhi due to govt steps

NEW DELHI: Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal on Friday said pollution levels declined in the national capital due to government initiatives as he announced the winter action plan to curb pollution.

The number of days witnessing severe pollution levels declined in the last eight years due to several initiatives of the government, such as the introduction of electric buses and the EV Policy, among others, he said at a press conference.

Announcing the winter action plan, Kejriwal said the Pusa biodecomposer that prevents stubble burning will be sprayed on 5,000 hectares of farmland this year against 4,400 hectares last year.

The Pusa bio-decomposer, developed by the Indian Agricultural Research Institute (IARI) here, is a microbial solution that can turn paddy straw into manure in 15-20

The government will deploy
530 water sprinklers to prevent dust pollution and 385 teams will check vehicles' pollution certificates and prevent the plying of overage

In 2018, the Supreme Court banned diesel and petrol vehicles older than 10 and 15 years, respectively, in Delhi. It had added that the vehicles plying in violation of the order would be impounded. A 2014 order from the National Green Tribunal bars vehicles older than 15 years to be parked in public places.

Kejriwal said burning garbage in the open is banned in Delhi and 611 teams will monitor its implementation. He also urged people to download the Green Delhi mobile application and report any pollution-causing activity to the government.

India slams rich nations' climate inaction; calls for focus on pre-2020 gaps, equity in Global Stocktake

NEW DELHI: India has said that the first-ever Global Stocktake outcome should prioritise addressing pre-2020 gaps, capture equity as an overarching concern and acknowledge the serious lack of ambition among developed nations in combating climate change.

Global Stocktake is a two-year UN review to evaluate collective global progress towards achieving the goals of the Paris Agreement.

This process will conclude at the end of COP28 in Dubai.

In a submission to the UNFCCC outlining its expectations from the Global Stocktake, India emphasised that the outcome should encourage developed nations to reduce their emissions in alignment with their historical responsibilities and provide support to developing countries in terms of finance, technology development and transfer, and capacity building.

The Global Stocktake outcome must promote global climate action within the context of poverty eradication, sustainable development, economic diversification efforts, and closing gaps in social and economic development between developed and developing countries, India emphasised.

It stressed that the First Global Stocktake outcome should not exclusively focus on future mitigation while disregarding "historical responsibility and pre-2020 emissions.

""Pre-2020 is the foundation upon which climate action must be built, and as such, pre-2020 gaps should be addressed as a matter of priority with a view to advancing long-term climate action and protecting the integrity of the Paris Agreement.

"It is an iterative process. There is a need to reaffirm the objectives, principles, and provisions of the Convention, in particular the principles of equity and CBDR-RC, keeping in view the process of enhanced action in the Pre-2020 period," it said.

The principle of equity ensures that countries' efforts to combat climate change are viewed in light of their contributions to greenhouse gas emissions, both historically and currently, as well as the likely future emissions they will generate.

The CBDR-RC principle recognises that each country bears responsibility for addressing climate change, but developed countries should shoulder primary responsibilities, given their significant historical and current greenhouse gas emissions.

India also made it clear that it does not support any other classification of developing countries, such as "major emitters", "G20 partners", and "other developing and emerging economies", as these classifications overlook national circumstances and replace considerations of "equity and CBDR-RC" in terms of climate actions.

Afghan Embassy in Delhi closes down

NEW DELHI: The Afghan Embassy in Delhi has closed down, due to lack of finances, in fighting amongst diplomats with some seeking asylum in other countries.

"Indian government is aware of the developments and have received a note verbal onthe same – which they are said to be examining. The authenticity of the communication and its contents are being examined. This is in the context of the Ambassador being out of India for past many months, steady departure of diplomats to third countries reportedly after receiving asylum as well as reports of infighting amongst Embassy personnel," according to a source.

The Afghans are also sore with India for not issuing visas for their students (nearly 2500) who wanted to continue their studies in India.

"We had written to the Indian government many times to enable Afghan students to continue their education in India, all in vain," said Onib Dadgar, who represents the student body of Afghans. Meanwhile, though the Indian government hasn't officially recognised the Taliban-led government in Afghanistan the embassy in Kabul is functional – which is referred to as a technical establishment which with the help of locals distributes humanitarian aid.

More than 70% of Nagorno-Karabakh's population flees as separatist government says it will dissolve

Nagorno-Karabakh's original population has fled to Armenia as the region's separatist government said it will dissolve itself and the unrecognized republic inside Azerbaijan will cease to exist by year's end after a three-decade bid for independence.

By Friday morning 84,770 people had left Nagorno-Karabakh, according to Armenian officials, continuing a mass exodus from the region of ethnic Armenians that began Sunday. The region's population was around 120,000 before the exodus began.

The moves came after Azerbaijan carried out a lightning offensive last week to reclaim full control over the breakaway region and demanded that Armenian troops in Nagorno-Karabakh disarm and the separatist government disband.

A decree signed by the region's separatist President Samvel

YEREVAN: More than 70% of Shakhramanyan cited a Sept. 20 agreement to end the fighting under which Azerbaijan will allow the "free, voluntary and unhindered movement" of Nagorno-Karabakh residents to

> Some of those who fled the regional capital of Stepanakert said they had no hope for the future.

> "I left Stepanakert having a slight hope that maybe something will change and I will come back soon, and these hopes are ruined after reading about the dissolution of our government," 21-year-old student Ani Abaghyan told The Associated Press on Thursday.

During the three decades of conflict in the region, Azerbaijan and separatists inside Nagorno-Karabakh, alongside allies in Armenia, have accused the other of targeted attacks, massacres and other atrocities, leaving people on both sides deeply suspicious and fearful.

While Azerbaijan has pledged to respect the rights of ethnic Armenians in the region, most are now fleeing as they do not believe the Azerbaijani authorities will treat them fairly and humanely or guarantee them their language, religion and culture.

After six years of separatist fighting ended in 1994 following the collapse of the Soviet Union, Nagorno-Karabakh came under the control of ethnic Armenian forces, backed by Armenia. Then, during a six-week war in 2020, Azerbaijan took back parts of the region in the south Caucasus Mountains along with surrounding territory that Armenian forces had claimed earlier.

Nagorno-Karabakh internationally recognized as part of Azerbaijan's sovereign territory. In December, Azerbaijan blockaded the only road connecting Nagorno-Karabakh with Armenia, alleging the Armenian government was using it for illicit weapons shipments to the region's separatist forces.

Armenia alleged the closure denied basic food and fuel supplies to Nagorno-Karabakh. Azerbaijan rejected the accusation, arguing that the region could receive supplies through the Azerbaijani city of Aghdam — a solution long resisted by Nagorno-Karabakh authorities, who called it a strategy for Azerbaijan to gain control of the region.

On Monday night, a fuel reservoir exploded at a gas station where people lined up for gas to fill their cars to flee to Armenia. At least 68 people were killed and nearly 300 injured, with over 100 others still considered missing after the blast, which exacerbated fuel shortages that were already dire after the blockade.

On Thursday, Azerbaijani

authorities charged Ruben Vardanyan. the former head of Nagorno-Karabakh's separatist government, with financing terrorism, creating illegal armed formations and illegally crossing a state border.

A day earlier, he was detained by Azerbaijani border guards as he was trying to leave Nagorno-Karabakh for Armenia along with tens of thousands of others.

Vardanyan, a billionaire who made his fortune in Russia, was placed in pretrial detention for at least four months and faces up to 14 years in prison. His arrest appeared to indicate Azerbaijan's intent to quickly enforce its grip on the region.

Another top separatist figure, Nagorno-Karabakh's former foreign minister and now presidential adviser David Babayan, said Thursday he will surrender to Azerbaijani authorities who ordered him to face a probe in 'The presence of the Afghan Diplomatic Mission in India cannot function normally without the help of the Indian government. After a careful consideration and assessment of the current situation, disappointingly the Embassy finds itself in a position where this support is not forthcoming. Given these circumstances, the Embassy has concluded that it is in our mission and its staff's best interest to bring it to a close by the end of September

The Embassy requests the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA)," according to a note verbal issued by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (Afghanistan).

While the Ambassador, Farid Mamundzay, has been in London for several months, many other diplomats have received asylum in several countries including the US, Canada and Australia.

Trouble had been brewing for many months after the power struggle between Ambassador Mamundzay and Talibanappointed Ambassador Qadir Shah became public a few months back.

Ambassador Mamundzay was appointed by the previous Ashraf Ghani government and has been operating as the envoy even after the Taliban took over in 2021.

However, in April Qadir Shah claimed to be appointed by the Taliban as head of India's mission. Shah has been working as a trade councillor since 2020 in Delhi.

After taking power the Taliban sent Ambassadors to four countries -Russia, Pakistan, China and Turkmenistan.

As China censors homegrown feminism, a feminist scholar from Japan is on its bestseller lists

HONG KONG: In the last few years, China's government has promoted increasingly conservative social values, encouraging women to focus on raising children. It has cracked down on civil society movements and made laws to drive out foreign influence.

So a 75-year-old Japanese feminist scholar who's not married and does not have children is an unlikely celebrity on the country's tightly censored internet.

But Chizuko Ueno, a professor emeritus at the University of Tokyo, is a phenomenon. She leapt to fame in China in 2019 with a speech that criticized social expectations for women to act cute and the pressure they face to hide their

Ueno's popularity reflects a surge in interest in women's rights, said Leta Hong Fincher, a research associate at the Weatherhead East Asian Institute who has written about gender discrimination and feminism in China.

About a decade ago, China had arambunctious feminist movement that staged protests like occupying a men's restroom to demand more toilets for women, or marching in wedding dresses spattered with fake blood to draw attention to domestic violence. But that movement has been silenced as Jinping's President Χi administration has tightened controls on civil society and promoted conservative family values in a bid to boost childbirths. Ueno declined multiple requests to be interviewed for this story.

In mainland China, Ueno's books sold more than half a million copies in the first half of 2023, according to sales tracker Beijing OpenBook, and 26 were available in Chinese bookstores as of September. They cover topics ranging from "misogyny" in Japanese society to feminist approaches to elder care issues in an ageing society.

"Starting From the Limit," a collection of letters between Ueno and Suzumi Suzuki, a writer who used to act in Japanese porn, topped the 2022 Books of the Year list on the popular Chinese review platform Douban.

Fans said Ueno's openness about choosing not to marry or have children makes her a role

Edith Cao, a writer who spoke on the condition of being identified by her English nickname due to fear of government retaliation, said seeing an East Asian woman succeed without a family helped her decide not to marry. Yang Xiao, a graduate student, said Ueno's example helped assuage her anxieties about being single and inspired her to start booking holidays alone to build confidence.

Relationships are a divisive issue even among Ueno's Chinese fans. Earlier this year, fans attacked a Chinese video blogger who asked Ueno if she hadn't married because "she'd been hurt by men," saying the blogger had reinforced traditional assumptions.

The fall of an enclave in Azerbaijan stuns the Armenian diaspora, extinguishing a dream

BEIRUT: The swift fall of the Armenian-majority enclave of Nagorno-Karabakhto Azerbaijani troops and exodus of much of its population has stunned the large Armenian diaspora around the world. Traumatized by genocide a century ago, they now fear the erasure of what they consider a central and beloved part of their historic homeland.

The separatist ethnic Armenian government in Nagorno-Karabakh on Thursday announced that it was dissolving and that the unrecognized republic will cease to exist by year's end – a seeming death knell for its 30-year defacto independence.

Azerbaijan, which routed the region's Armenian forces in a lightning offensive last week, has pledged to respect the rights of the territory's Armenian community. But by Thursday morning, 74,400 people - over 60% of Nagorno-Karabakh's population – had fled to Armenia, and the influx continues, according to Armenian officials.

Many in Armenia and the diaspora fear a centuries-long community in the territory they call Artsakh will disappear in what they call a new wave of ethnic cleansing. They accuse European countries, Russia and the United States - and the government of Armenia itself - of failing to protect ethnic Armenians during months of blockade of the territory by Azerbaijan's military and in the lightning blitz earlier this month that defeated separatist forces.

Armenians say the loss is a historic blow. Outside the modern country of Armenia itself, the mountainous land was one of the only surviving parts of a heartland that centuries ago stretched across what is now eastern Turkey, into the Caucasus region and western Iran.

Many in the diaspora had pinned dreams on it gaining independence or being joined to Armenia.

Nagorno-Karabakh was "a page of hope in Armenian history," Narod Seroujian, a Lebanese-Armenian university instructor in Beirut, said Thursday.

"It showed us that there is hope to gain back a land that is rightfully ours ... For the diaspora, Nagorno-Karabakh was already part of Armenia."

Hundreds of Lebanese Armenians on Thursday protested outside the Azerbajani Embassy in Beirut. They waved flags of Armenia and Nagorno-Karabakh and burned pictures of the Azerbaijani and Turkish presidents. Riot police lobbed tear gas when they threw firecrackers at the embassy.Ethnic Armenians have communities around Europe and the Middle East and in the United States. Lebanon is home to one of the largest, with an estimated 120,000 of Armenian origin, 4% of the population.

Teen in court after schoolgirl becomes latest UK knife victim

LONDON: A teenager will appear in a London court on Friday charged with the murder of a 15-year-old schoolgirl in a case that has once again shone the spotlight on UK knife crime.

Elianne Andam was stabbed to death in Croydon, south London, as she went to school.

A 17-year-old boy, who cannot be named for legal reasons, was arrested shortly afterwards. He is due to appear at youth court, sitting at Croydon Magistrates' Court, later Friday charged with murder and possession of a knife, police said in a statement. Emergency services including an air ambulance were called to the scene at around 8:30 am (0730 GMT) following reports of a stabbing. Paramedics battled to save the girl but she was pronounced dead at the scene 50 minutes

London mayor Sadiq Khan said he was "heartbroken" by the fatal incident and pledged to "continue working day and night to end the scourge of knife crime in our city".

According to official figures, 99 people under the age of 25 were killed in England and Wales with a knife or sharp object in the year to March 2023. Of those 13 were under the age of 16.

The deaths were among 50,000 stabbing incidents in the year to March 2023, a five percent increase on the previous year and a 75 percent increase on a decade ago, the figures from the Office for National Statistics showed. Andam was a pupil at Old Palace of John Whitgift School, a private girls' school in Croydon.

"We are deeply shocked by the senseless and tragic death of our much-loved and valued friend and pupil," the school said in a statement.

Karabakh fuel depot blast toll jumps to 170: Officials

YEREVAN: The toll from an explosion at a fuel depot in Nagorno-Karabakh that was thronged with Armenians fleeing an Azerbaijani military offensive has jumped to 170 people, authorities in the region announced Friday.

The blast occurred days after the breakaway region's separatist fighters announced they would disarm and integrate with Azerbaijan, spurring an exodus of thousands of ethnic

"To date, a total of 170 remains ... have been found in the same area and handed over to the forensic medical examination bureau," separatist authorities said in a statement on social media.

Authorities had earlier said the blast claimed the lives of 68 people and wounded another 200. They said Monday that the remains would be transferred to Armenia for identification.

Russia says 11 Ukrainian drones destroyed overnight

MOSCOW: Russia claimed on Friday that it had destroyed 11 Ukrainian drones overnight, though one UAV dropped explosives on a substation, cutting the local power supply, a regional governor said.

"Eleven Ukrainian unmanned aerial vehicles were destroyed by air defence systems on duty, one of them over the territory of Kaluga region and 10 over Kursk region," Russia's defence ministry said on the messaging platform Telegram.

Kursk governor Roman Starovoyt said that the region bordering eastern Ukraine was "massively attacked" by Ukrainian UAVs.

In Belaya village, less than 25 kilometres (16 miles) from the border, "a Ukrainian drone dropped two explosive devices on a substation", he said on Telegram.

"One of the transformers caught

Five settlements and a hospital were cut off from power supply. Fire crews rushed to the scene," he added. "Power will be restored as soon as it is safe to do so.' The governor warned citizens that "due to the danger of self-destruction of downed UAVs, it is forbidden to touch their debris, approach them or take photographs".

Russia earlier said it had destroyed two Ukrainian drones on Thursday evening over the neighbouring Belgorod region. The defence ministry said the first drone was "thwarted" at about 5:00pm (1400 GMT), while a second was brought down around four hours

The Belgorod and Kursk regions, south of Moscow, border eastern Ukraine. Kaluga region is closer to the Russian capital.

Since Ukraine launched its counteroffensive in early June, Russia has weathered waves of drone attacks that have sporadically damaged buildings, including in Moscow.

Mental Health Matters

In a world that often prioritizes physical health, it's time to shine a brighter spotlight on mental health. The importance of mental health awareness cannot be overstated, as it impacts every aspect of our lives. Mental health is not a niche concern; it's a universal issue. According to the World Health Organization, one in four people will be affected by mental or neurological disorders at some point in their lives. These disorders know no boundaries; they affect people of all ages, backgrounds, and walks of life. Yet, stigma and misconceptions about mental health persist, preventing countless individuals from seeking help. By raising awareness, we can challenge these stigmas and create a more compassionate society where people feel safe discussing their mental health. Mental health awareness is not just about acknowledging problems; it's also about promoting well-being. It's about teaching individuals the skills to manage stress, build resilience, and maintain good mental health. When people have the tools to take care of their minds, they can lead more fulfilling lives.Furthermore, mental health awareness has broader societal benefits. It reduces the economic burden of untreated mental illness, enhances workplace productivity, and strengthens communities. Mental health awareness is not a luxury; it's a necessity. By fostering understanding, empathy, and support, we can create a world where mental health is valued, protected, and prioritized. Let's start the conversation and make mental health a global priority.

Ending Opioid Addiction and Deaths through Creative Strategies

Phil Pasquini

Citing horrific statistics that "An estimated 221 Americans die every day (80,564 in the past 12 months) from an opioid overdose, and an estimated 5.6 million experience an opioid use disorder, affecting individuals, families, and communities across the nation," the Foundation for Opioid Response Efforts (FORE), a national grant making organization, held a press conference during National Recovery Month titled "New Initiatives to Fight the Opioid and Overdose Crisis Facing Amer-that grants have focused on access and evidence-based treatment for those most at risk by death from overdose. Most important in awarding funding is "the removal of barriers by linking people with care." Last year FORE began funding 11 family and community-based prevention programs, its largest to date. This new series of grants will focus on children, youth and family including those presently impacted by drug abuse to "change the trajectory of the next generation."

Jeanette Betancourt, EdD, Senior Vice President for U.S. Social Impact at Sesame Workshop, the nonprofit organization

Dwayne Dean, a 27-year substance abuser now entering his 10th year of sobriety, reflected on how the subject of drugs and addiction when he was younger were not an approachable subject with his mother who did not answer his questions. He soon realized that "every child is going to learn in spite" of answers not being forthcoming. Respective to opioid addiction he went on to say that "Our children are begging for bread and they have no one to break it for them. They have questions, we have to help them to understand, cause they are gonna learn even if it's not from us. We need to guide, direct and feed them." We must "Have those hard conversations now with our youth because they are curious and they

FORE is a privately funded national grant making organization that was founded in 2018 to fund specific projects by U.S. nonprofit tax-exempt organizations, universities, state and local governments along with Native American tribal governments. Their grant funding seeks to engage grantees in discovering "creative strategies with and in testing new approaches while enhancing proven ways to prevent and reduce opioid use and overdoses."

Since its inception they have focused on four specific areas: professional education, payer and provider strategies, policy initiatives and public awareness. FORE funds grants focused on prevention through "innovative solutions and how policymakers, health care providers, parents, caregivers, educators, the court system, all involved in the future of our children, can work together to improve adult-child relationships and family resilience." As reported here earlier, America's youth are most affected by the crisis of opioid overdose which is the leading cause of death for those between the ages of 18-45 years of age.

In discussing the ongoing opioid use and overdose crisis, a panel of experts along with two former opioid abusers emphasized education for younger children, youth and families as key to preventing another generation becoming victims.

Dr. Andrea Barthwell, MD, DFASAM, Chair of FORE's Board of Directors, in her opening comments pointed out that "the market of substances of misuse is subject to demand, is extremely nimble and increasingly poisonous and deadly. A balanced national strategy requires that we explore, implement and integrate innovative solutions" in the prevention and intervention of and treatment for those who are substance abusers.

She continued by announcing two new recent grants: one for Sesame Street Workshop the iconic children's TV program ($840,000) and a second grant ($500,000) to the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) "our nation's children's doctors." The Sesame Street grant would develop programming that introduces the subject of drug abuse and addiction to educate younger audiences.

The AAP grant according to FORE's website would be used to "Create and disseminate educational tools that enhance the capacity of clinicians to prevent, identify, and treat substance use among adolescents and young adults." These two new grants bring FORE's total portfolio of its awards in its five years of existence to 100 for a total of $39 million.

President of FORE, Dr. Karen A. Scott, MD, MPH, related behind Sesame Street described the mission as to "grow all children in making them smarter, stronger and kinder." In achieving those goals, they utilize "the power of media and research and the power of education and the power of childhood development to really empower the next generation."

Behind this approach is their philosophy of "The Circle of care... That every adult is a key influencer in young children's development." This for children who live in households where their main caregiver is affected by a substance abuse disorder and who have many questions about their circumstances which they may be unable to express, along with not receiving the required nurturing they need in their development which can be especially impactful.

Sesame Street recognizes that "in order to counteract the effects we must begin in early childhood." In attempting to have a positive influence they have created a special Muppet in utilizing its power to influence young minds and behavior. "Karli" as she is named deals with her mother's struggle with substance abuse. Kari's story begins when she enters foster care paralleling that of many children's experiences in similar circumstances.

Their biggest discovery in research of young children in substance abuse households was "...that they (children) also felt guilty that they were causing their parents' addiction, as young as three, feeling that it was something they did or that they didn't behave" causing the parental addiction. Through their use of Kari she related, they are "creating a sense of hope, a sense of awareness and making a difference wholistically."

While most of the discussion centered on academic research, psychological and medical interventions and the social stigma of substance abuse and its effects, former substance abusers, Lucy Battles and Dwayne Dean, presented their personal struggles with addiction emphasizing the importance of early childhood education.

Battles, in her 12th year of opioid abuse recovery, related as a teenage she abused alcohol and while in college after a dental procedure became addicted to Percocet using it daily for four years. Her addiction eventually turned to homelessness and she resorted to criminal activity until pressured into a treatment program through the courts. She noted that children whose parents have substance abuse problems have an increased chance of doing the same. The "Opioid crisis does not discriminate and affects all communities." She now works with others and commented that Sesame Street has done an incredible service to children and families around the substance abuse issue.

want to know why. We have to change the narrative we have to talk about it (drugs)."

Sesame Street Workshop he related allows for people to discuss these subjects by raising them in their programing which in turn makes it easier for parents to have these conversations with their children. As the now proud father of a two-year-old daughter, he felt confident in having those conversations the program raises in establishing a brighter and drug free future for his child. (CC)

Trent Bridge to rename Pavilion End in honour of Stuart Broad

The Pavilion End at Trent Bridge is to be renamed The Stuart Broad End, in recognition of the former Nottinghamshire and England seamer who retired from professional cricket after this summer's Ashes.

Broad, 37, bowed out in style at The Oval this summer, claiming the 604th and final wicket of his 16-year Test career to square the Ashes 2-2 with a 49-run victory over Australia.

And, having confirmed on the penultimate evening of the match that he would be retiring from all cricket, Nottinghamshire have chosen to commemorate Broad with the same honour that Lancashire chose for his longstanding England team-mate, James Anderson, when they renamed Old Trafford's Pavilion End in his honour in 2017.

Though Broad began his professional career at Leicestershire, his ties to Trent Bridge were strong long before he joined the county for the first of his 16 seasons in 2007, thanks to his father Chris, who opened the batting for Nottinghamshire from 1984 to 1992, and is currently the club president.

Many of Broad's finest hours in Test cricket also came while bowling from the End that will now bear his name. In 2011, he turned the course of that summer's second Test against India with the first of his two Test hat-tricks (and still the only one to have been completed at the ground).

And then, in 2015, he produced his career-best spell of 8 for 15 to bowl Australia out for 60 on the opening morning of the fourth Test, in so doing all but sealing England's reclaiming of the Ashes.

Mo Bobat to join RCB as director of cricket after 12 years in England set-up

Mo Bobat, England Men's while reinvigorating their Test performance director, has been confirmed as the new director of cricket at Royal Challengers Bangalore in the IPL, and will leave the ECB in February next year.

Bobat, 40, has overseen the England Men's pathway for the past four years, identifying and developing the players that have helped the team win World Cups in the 50-over and 20-over formats, fortunes under the captain-coach partnership of Ben Stokes and Brendon McCullum.

He has been working at the ECB since 2011, initially managing the England Men's Under-19s programme, before being appointed the ECB's first Player Identification Lead in 2016.

Bobat has previously worked with RCB on a consultancy basis, and has a long-standing relationship with Andy Flower, RCB's new head coach, from their years working together at the ECB. Now the pair will be resuming that partnership at the IPL, ahead of the 2024 staging.

"I've had the most amazing 12 years at the ECB and it's been both an honour and a privilege to have spent the last four years as Performance Director," Bobat said. "Supporting our efforts towards multiple Ashes campaigns and World Cups has quite literally been the stuff of dreams. "I'll be forever $grateful \, for \, all \, of \, the \, opportunities \,$ and support that I received over the years and will carry with me many special memories, shared achievements and friendships.

"I'd like to thank all of my current and former colleagues, and of course all of the players that I've been able to enjoy time with. I'd specifically like to thank Rob Key for showing me so much trust over the last 18 months.

Australia 'very much consider' Maxwell as frontline spin option

Glenn Maxwell has been backed to play the role of a frontline spinner for Australia during the World Cup after they opted not to replace the injured Ashton Agar like-forlike. They instead brought in Marnus Labuschagne to provide batting cover as Travis Head recovers from his broken hand.

It means that Maxwell and Adam Zampa are Australia's only genuine spin options among their 14 fit players given that Steven Smith barely bowls anymore and Labuschagne's legspin has faded in recent years. Should Head recover and be able to bowl, his offspin would provide a valuable option.

There is yet to be a specific target for Head's comeback, but he isn't expected to be available until at least midway through the group stage.

Maxwell took a career-best 4 for 40 in the final ODI against India in Rajkot, and although he averages 47.71 in ODIs, national selector George Bailey believes his bowling should not be underestimated.

"Think it's unfair on Maxi to say he's not a specialist spinner," Bailey said. "Think his white-ball spinning record is pretty handy and you could very much consider him a frontline option. We certainly consider that we have two frontline spinners within our first-choice XI.

"More broadly across the squad, when you are limited to 15 [players], there are compromises that you have to weigh up [and] which way to want to take a risk. That was all the considerations that we had to take. We certainly think that Zamps and Maxi can do a really good job for us as the frontline spinners and we've still got plenty of options for quicks and back-up allrounders."

Maxwell's outing in Rajkot was only his second ODI since suffering a badly broken leg last year and there have been concerns about how he would cope with an intense World Cup schedule after pulling up with an ankle problem on Australia's first day of training in South Africa last month.

However, Bailey praised the work Maxwell has put in to get himself ready for the tournament although did suggest there may be times when he is given a break.

Sutherland, Boland help Victoria to victory after Harper's career-best

Victoria remained unbeaten in the domestic one-day competition after a comfortable 59-run win over New South

NSW's chase never got going at the Junction Oval in Melbourne on Friday and they were all out for 239 in the 47th over as Victoria backed up their win over Tasmania at the same venue in the opening game of the campaign.

Allrounder Will Sutherland enjoyed his best day out with the ball since suffering a stress fracture in his back in March. Sutherland, who appeared to be an outside chance of an Ashes call-up before being injured, took the final wicket of the match to finish with figures of 3 for 39.

The 23-year-old also took a catch off Todd Murphy's bowling for the second last wicket of NSW's innings.

NSW opener Daniel Hughes, who had a golden summer in the one-day cup last season, top-scored for the visitors with 69. But once Sutherland dismissed Hughes in the 37th over, NSW's hopes of victory went with him.

Test quick Scott Boland claimed the wickets of Oliver Davies and opener Jack Edwards to finish with figures of 2 for 56.

After captain Peter Handscomb won the toss and elected to bat, Victoria powered to 298 for 7.

Asian Games: Ramkumar-Myneni pair takes silver in men"s doubles

HANGZHOU: Ramkumar Ramanathan and Saketh Myneni settled for the men's doubles silver medal at the Asian Games after being edged by Hsu Yu-Hsiou and Jason Jung from Chinese Taipei in straight sets in the final, here on Friday.

The Taipei team was unseeded but both Hsu (182) and Jung (231) were better-ranked singles players and it showed in their ground strokes and the way they went about their business in a 6-4 6-4 victory against the second-seeded Indians in the title clash.

Hsu was solid from the baseline with his strong serve while Jung complimented him with his lightning-fast hands at the net.

It is Ramkumar's first Asian Games medal and third for Myneni, who had won a men's doubles silver with Sanam Singh and a gold with Sania Mirza in the mixed doubles in the 2014 Incheon edition.

This is also the first tennis medal from this edition.

In Indonesia in 2018, India had won three medals but they will return with only two from Hangzhou.

Rohan Bopanna and Rutuja

Bhosale are assured of a medal after reaching the mixed doubles semifinals while the country's players have been ousted from other events.

In the men's doubles final, no team lost a point in the first three games.It was only when Jung double-faulted in the fourth game that a team scored a point on the rival's serve.

It was 2-2 with all four players holding their serves as some highquality serving was on display.

Ramkumar's serve was under pressure when Hsu found a stunning forehand winner to go up 30-0.

It was 30-all when Jung hit a service return winner to earn the first breakpoint of the match.

The Taipei team got the break with Jung finding a volley winner.

Hsu consolidated the break for a 4-2 lead as he hit deep returns from the baseline and the Indians committed a few unforced errors.

Jung struggled a bit with his first serve but his partner was terrific at the net.

Coming out to serve for staving in the set, Ramkumar began with a double fault but made up for that with a couple of aces.

Bavuma confident South Africa can make Cricket World Cup history as de Kock bows out

Quinton de Kock will make a last hurrah at the Cricket World Cup in India starting next week as part of an in-form South Africa team which will lean on his experience and a pace-heavy bowling attack as it attempts to win the tournament for the first time.

At 30, the wicketkeeper-batsman and this will be his one-day international swansong.

It could also be a crowning moment in his career if South Africa can maintain the form that took them from 2-0 down to beat Australia 3-2 in a recent ODI series.

50-over World Cup has been three semifinal appearances.

South Africa's best result at the Temba Bavuma will again captain counsel of players such as de Kock, who has captained the Proteas in all three formats. Bavuma leads a powerful team diminished only slightly by the absence of fast bowlers Anrich Nortje and Sisanda Magala, who failed fitness tests before the squad left for India.

Both played in the series against has already retired from test cricket Australia but Nortje has been forced out with a back issue, having also missed the 2019 World Cup with a thumb injury, while Magala has a knee problem.

Paceman Lizaad Williams and allrounder Andile Phehlukwayo have been called up in their place in a squad that also includes fast bowlers Kagiso Rabada. Marco Jansen, Lungi Ngidi and Gerald Coetzee. "It's great having a mix of South Africa and can rely on the experienced players and players who will be competing in their first 50over World Cup," Proteas coach Rob Walter said. "You get that sort of exuberance or excitement to be doing something for the first time.

"We have endeavoured to curate a well-balanced group of players and skill that will allow us to effectively adapt to the conditions in India. Our strength has been fast bowling and we want to be able to have four highquality fast bowlers in the park in most situations." South Africa's history in limited overs World Cups has not always been a happy one.

They have had no success in the 50-over World Cup — which they hosted in 2003 – and while they staged the first T20 World Cup in 2007, they also have never won it. In its last edition, they were beaten by the Netherlands.

Bavuma remembers that defeat and its fallout and uses it to harden his determination to succeed in India this time.

"The emotion that was attached to that day and everything that happened around it, I think that's subsided from my side," Bavuma said. "I used that emotion as motivation and really tried to forge a new way for myself within my cricketing career. "If I look back now, since that day things have been going well for myself but also for the team. I was laughing about it. There's no negative emotions or trauma coming back here."

Bavuma sees a new South Africa team: stronger, better-balanced and more focused. He says players have more belief in each other and that will be critical over the six weeks of the World Cup when, inevitably, all teams will be tested.

"The way we've been going about our business this year, it has been in contrast to what people have known us as a team," he said. "We spoke a lot about being bold, being fearless, being positive and always looking for moments to move the game in our favor."

South Africa plays its first match at the World Cup on Oct. 7 against Sri Lanka, followed by an Australia rematch on Oct. 12.

reatine supplements are popular among fitness enthusiasts. It's no wonder, with research showing it may help improve strength and power, and support recovery between workouts.

Given its many benefits, a team of researchers recently decided to investigate whether it could help people with long Covid. They specifically wanted to know whether creatine could help combat fatigue, which is one of the most common and debilitating long Covid symptoms.

The researchers from Serbia conducted a randomised controlled trial involving 12 people who'd had a recent long Covid diagnosis. This is the best study design to work out whether or not a treatment is effective.

Participants were randomly assigned to either receive a daily creatine supplement or a placebo (in this case inulin a type of fibre). The treatment and placebo were an identical white powder that was mixed into water. This ensured neither the participants nor the researchers knew who'd received the creatine supplement until the trial was complete. The trial lasted over six months, ensuring the creatine had enough time to have an effect.

The researchers measured several outcomes including how fatigued participants reported feeling and whether other long Covid symptoms (such as loss of smell) improved. The researchers also tracked how long participants could walk without feeling exhausted (an objective measure of fatigue), as well as levels of creatine in both muscle and brain tissues. This last outcome is important as it shows the supplement has made a measurable difference in the body and shows participants adhered to the treatment.

Between 90-95% of participants took the supplement as directed for the duration of the study. Only one patient on creatine reported experiencing mild nausea.

After six months, the creatine group was shown to have higher concentrations of creatine in their muscles and brain tissue compared with the placebo group. But when the researchers looked at fatigue levels both objective and self-reported they found there was no difference between the placebo group and the creatine group.

However, the researchers did find that creatine may have some benefit when it comes to other long Covid symptoms (including loss of smell and taste, breathing difficulties, lung pain, body aches, headaches and trouble concentrating).

While all participants reported improvements in their long Covid symptoms by the end of the study, these improvements were greater in the creatine group. But it's worth noting that it's difficult to judge how severe these symptoms were to begin with or how great the improvements were as no information was provided on the scale the researchers used.

These results suggest that creatine appears to have had a positive effect on some self-reported long Covid symptoms. But creatine did not appear to have any effect on physical fatigue, which was a key focus of the trial.

The researchers suggest several potential mechanisms by which creatine could be causing these effects. One possible mechanism could be that it aids in adenosine triphosphate recycling in the brain and muscles. This molecule is important for energy production and release, and so creatine may make energy more available within these tissues.

Another potential mechanism could be that creatine changes nerve regulation by protecting the nerve cells and reducing nerve cell death, which might help brain symptoms. Creatine is also anti-inflammatory and has antioxidant effects, which may help prevent tissue damage thereby preserving the function of the brain and muscle cells.

Need for research

This is the first study examining the use of creatine to treat symptoms of long Covid. The results are encouraging, and suggest it may be worth further exploration. But this is by no means enough evidence to warrant recommending this supplement to anyone who has long Covid.

Given the study used only a very few people, this means there's still a lot we don't know for certain when it comes to using creatine for long Covid symptoms including whether sex differences affect a person's response to the supplement, if creatine works equally well in people of all ages and what effect a person's diet and exercise habits may have on how they respond to creatine.
